Addison Gives $168 to Red Cross

Rev. Thomas A. Withey, chairman of the Red Cross drive in Addison has presented his final report. The total sum taken in Addison and vicinity was $168.20. Of this sum, according to the Rev. Withey, 40 per cent will remain in Addison for local relief work, 10 per cent will go to the county headquarters in Corning and the balance will go to National headquarters, Washington for national and international emergencies.

The chairman wishes to thank all the members of the campaign committee for their efforts to make this drive the success it was. He also wishes to thank personally and on behalf of the committee, all who so generously responded to the appeal for funds.

The name of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Park was inadvertently left off the list last week as contributors.

Mrs. Nora Husted, who submitted to an operation at the St. James Mercy Hospital in Hornell three weeks ago returned to her home Friday. She was accompanied by her son, Howard Husted.

New Roadway Being Built Into CCC Camp

A roadway with a sub base of stone and rock, a base of gravel and a top surface will be erected into the CCC camp. Work on the road has started during the past week. An average of 40 loads of gravel are being drawn and dumped at the present time.

The work is under the supervisiin of Lieutenant Willard Johnson, engineering officer in the camp. Seven trucks are being used to haul gravel. Much of this material is taken from that dug about the camp for the construction of buildings and sewer lines and pits. Permission has also been secured to purchase gravel from the farm of Walter Rusby adjoining the camp.

The present road will be abandoned owing to severe mud conditions and the winding path to Route 17. There will be a "Y" leading from the camp road, one to Hornell and the other to Addison, when the road is completed. However the Addison branch is being constructed first and it will probably be several weeks before work will begin on the Hornell branch.

Representatives of those troops appeared before Mr. Gray to receive their certificates.

Executive Percy Dun announced the recruiting on the drive for Scouts had officially closed, but owing to the fact that many Scouts felt they could bring additional Scouts into their troops before the close of the year, Acorn awards were to be given to each Scout bringing in an additional Scout. Scoutmasters were given the President Head Acorn awards and will make the presentation within their troops. This drive closes December 25.

Mr. Dunn announced that the Court of Honor Committee has ruled that any Scout may receive his Eagle award at any Scout function in the home troop up to February 8, 1937. A BELATED RETIREMENT

Edward Windsor has returned to private life. Behind him he has left a broken-hearted mother, a series of broken friendships, a country divided against itself, a weakened allegiance to the crown on the part of colonial governments and a scandal that has rocked Europe politically, economically, socially and religiously.

Was all this necessary?

Edward Windsor knew his failings and weaknesses before he accepted the responsibility of the throne. He knew his dislike for it and at that time his friendship for Wallie Simpson had reached a stage way beyond conventional friendship. With this in mind, why did he accept the throne?

And after having accepted it, why did he keep it in the face of all that has happened? Did he think he could defy convention, tradition and his subjects forever?

Edward Windsor is a traditionally spoiled youngster. He wanted to eat his cake and have it too, but it can't be done. If he had not been so stubborn he could have resigned several weeks ago and saved all the embarrassment and trouble he caused and press notices would not have been filled with the lurid details of his private life.

Other kings and queens have defied conventions, their subjects and the world, with the result there are fewer monarchies. It is only due to the natural stability of the English people that insidious forces did not use this as an excuse for overthrowing the monarchy.

Edward Windsor can be thankful there was no revolution caused from the lack of foresight.

THE MILK CONFERENCE

A short time ago an editorial appeared in this paper suggesting that all groups interested in the dairy industry could profitably get together in a conference to settle differences militating against the common good. Almost simultaneously Peter Ten Eyck, milk commissioner, made a public statement expressing a similar thought and last week Raymond Cooper, master of the State Grange advocated the same idea. Saturday Mr. Cooper announced the tentative plan for a meeting of the farm organizations of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Vermont to consider plans for stabilizing the milk industry. The meeting will be held December 28-29 in New York.

This announcement by Mr. Cooper is the most progressive step taken by eastern farmers in years, and shows that many influential individuals and groups in the industry are becoming tired of the futile bickering carried on in the past few years. It presages a newer, broader view of their problems by dairy leaders which alone can bring them to a real solution of their woes. Too often in the past each group — processors, distributors, producers and cooperatives have assumed the position that they alone were right and all other groups were entirely in the wrong. Such an attitude could never bring order out of the kind of tangle in which divergent milk interests have been snarled. A snarl of thread can only be untangled by patient effort, passing the end in and out of the loops of the tangle until the cord is straightened carefully out into one, unknotted piece.

All parties with an interest in the problem must be carefully considered for a real solution. At one end of the string is the producer and at the other is the consumer; both must profit by any plan which is to be successful, as well as the processor and distributor. And this conference should take a broader viewpoint of the problem than the monetary one alone. They should look beyond the horizon of the present and see the welfare of babies yet unborn, babies whose health and happiness will certainly be affected by the food consumed by their mothers and themselves, when they are born. For the medical profession is now aware the use of whole milk by prospective mothers and babies has a direct bearing upon child health. So one phase of this problem is to bridge the gap between producer and consumer with a grade of whole milk which can compete with the less nourishing evaporated substitute.

Because neither these unborn babies nor their parents can sit in as a part of this conference, their welfare should not be lost sight of by the participating parties.

If the conference is to succeed the milk industry represented must wake up to the fact it is a big business and should adopt some of the tried tools of big business. One of the sharpest tools used in the distribution of consumer articles is advertising, and until the milk industry sets the powerful arms of advertising effectively to work, it cannot develop its market to an appreciable extent. For profit to the eastern dairyman is inseparably tied with getting a larger portion of his milk used in fluid form.

Altogether the conference faces a huge task. A task so great it can only be solved by submerging petty differences of opinion in a plan for the good of all concerned.

THIN ICE

Skaters have made their appearance on the Canisteo River.

We realize that advice is freely given and seldom taken, but in the hope that one person will act on our suggestions we ask skaters to observe the following rules: Test the ice with a stick or some other sharp instrument and assure yourself there is at least four inches of ice before skating; do not skate alone; have a rope or log or plank handy to aid in case the ice breaks; carry a sharp instrument with you so you can claw your way over the ice should you break through and do not lose your head. Skating is a pleasure and should be enjoyed but the dangerous elements in it should not be overlooked.

RUMORS OF WAR

Japan recently concluded a new treaty with Germany, which is regarded by Russians as a slap in the face, coming as it does in these days when one rumor of war has followed another in rapid succession across the panorama of the world. Does this new treaty mean the much discussed conflict between the Russians and Japs is soon to get under way?

No one knows for sure, not even the people of Japan, which nation has studiously been preparing to bait the Russian bear for several years. One recent incident points to Japanese aggression in the near future. A few weeks ago Russia was prepared to sign an agreement with Japan permitting Japanese fishermen certain much desired rights along the Siberian coast. Then suddenly on the eve of this treaty the Japs announced they were about to form a pact with Hitler, and this latter alliance soon was consummated.

Now the fishing rights along Siberia are extremely valuable to the Japanese, and they would not have thrown the coveted treaty overboard, willy-nilly, unless their leaders believed something better had come to hand. The fact Japan has long been negotiating with the Fascists, points to their reliance on this new German treaty as a great help in the west when war breaks out with Russia. The Japs may now reason, "what use a fishing treaty, if we can attack Russia and take the coast of Siberia and considerable Soviet territory by force?" Which reasoning is right in line with the temper of the Militarist party that holds sway in Nippon.

Russia fully expects the Japs to srike, and when they do the Russian bear will be a far more ferocious enemy than the lumbering old animal which slumbered during the days of the Czar. The Siberian railroad is now ready to rush supplies to the east, and the Russians will depend largely upon the effectiveness of an enormous air force. Japanese cities are especially vulnerable to air attacks, and with Russian flying bases established in Siberia the Red flyers will have a comparatively short hop before sowing destruction from the clouds on many innocent heads in old Japan.

War looks imminent indeed these days and with the tension created through surreptitious taking sides in the Spanish civil war, the chances favor most of Europe getting embroiled. One strong indication is the fact some European powers are hinting they would like to pay something to Uncle Sam on the war debts—not much of course, but a few million which might re-establish their credit on this side of the Atlantic. Just now those war debts are an excellent insurance to keep American investors from getting struck with more foreign bonds. If Europe wants to pay debts according to the greatly scaled down rate fixed by the modified plan, all well and good. Otherwise we should continue holding the bag, at the same time hoping it will protect us from further foreign entanglements.

THE EVER-PRESENT PROBLEM

It would be a fine thing if every member of Congress went to Washington with this thought in mind: Taxation is the biggest internal problem today."

In spite of better business, in spite of strong upturn in the national income, the problem of taxation looms as large as ever. The deficit remains and the national debt reaches new and staggering proportions.

If we want continued good business, if we want real and permanent prosperity, we must have a balanced budget. We must gradually and systematically lower the debt load. We must reduce taxes.

Security Act Compulsory Clause Is Opposed as Federal Dictation

By MARK SULLIVAN

T TH[illegible]nt several states are taking steps to adopt legislation [illegible] insurance, in conformity with the social security [illegible]ral system. "Practically all the states that have not already done [illegible] will take up such statutes when their legislatures meet in January of [illegible]r. Up to the present fifteen states and the District of Columbia have acted. It is confidently expected that within a short time every state will have adopted legislation of this type.

The acts adopted by the states do not need to be identical. The whole system begins with the Federal government at Washington. The Federal government will control the system. The Federal act anticipates, however, that each state will pass its own act and that the Federal government will co-operate with the states. The Federal act requires that the acts passed by the states conform, in a general way, to the Federal act.

Let us admit, as nearly everybody does admit, that old-age insurance is desirable, either by a government system or by private ones. Admit, as most persons do, that it is desirable for the government to provide this insurance to those who want the government to do it. Admit, as most persons do, that the present Federal act is a good groundwork and beginning (though, as a member of the Federal Social Security Board, Mr. Vincent M. Miles says, the act is not perfect and "may be changed as experience dictates"). Finally, let us admit, merely for the purpose of argument, that the details of the present Federal act are as they should be—with one exception.

The exception is this: The law compels workers to take the insurance which the act provides. The law compels every worker to whom it applies to take the insurance whether he wants it or not, whether he needs it or not, whether he would prefer private insurance or not. The law compels each one to surrender one cent out of every dollar of his pay check (rising later to three cents).

It is this compulsion that seems to be objectionable. The objection is not alone the compulsion that takes money from the worker whether he wants to give it or not. It is likely that practically all workers will want the government insurance. It is likely there is much public good in requiring every person to be insured against old age. Those who are not thus insured, and thereby become public dependents, are a charge to the rest of us. Hence, the rest of us have some right to insist that each individual be insured, for the good of all, as well as for the good of the individual. Since many persons are prone to neglect insurance unless it is pressed upon them, there is much public good in making the pressure strong.

Yet the pressure ought to stop short of absolute and universal compulsion. There are many who provide their own old-age insurance in their own way. There are many who have long had insurance through pension systems set up by private employers, or benevolent or trade associations. There are many who have means and do not need the insurance. For these there should be immunity from compulsion.

To compel a man to take and pay for insurance whether he wants to or not and whether he needs it or not is a violation of the very basis of the American conception of society. It is a new extension of the power of the state to put compulsion upon the individual. And every American tradition calls out to us to resist such extension. Every sound American instinct tells us such extension is dangerous.

I hesitate to use the "entering wedge" argument; but if we now submit to taking an insurance we do not want, our submission may become a precedent from which later we may find ourselves required to take a religion we do not want, a form of education we do not want, a peacetime military service we do not want, a surrender of habeas corpus, of freedom of speech.

The most conspicuous fact in the world today is the rapid spread of two conceptions of society and government, in both of which the fundamental characteristic is compulsion of the individual to submit to the government—dictation by the government in every area of life in which government chooses to assert autocratic power. In both Fascism and Communism the fundamental rule is that the individual has no freedom of choice, no rights which the government need respect. The aim is the "authoritarian state," the "totalitarian state." The ideal is uniformity—uniformity and, therefore, conformity.

The most solemn duty of Americans is to safeguard our own country from infection by this rapidly spreading conception of society and government. This infection, like those of disease, gets its foothold insidiously and becomes a contagion before the victims are aware. The time to stop is at the first invasion. That "the price of liberty is eternal vigilance" is an American axiom.

The Rewards of A Liberal Policy

WALTER LIPPMANN

It is indeed the truth that, whereas in Europe and Asia things have been going from bad to worse, in the Western Hemisphere international relations have been improving. This is not mere accident and good luck. It is the happy result of a decisive reversal of ideas and of policies within the last ten years, and it is strictly accurate to say that President Roosevelt received so great an ovation in South America because since about 1926 this country has been renouncing an imperialistic and has been returning to a liberal foreign policy.

Ten years ago the United States was feared and distrusted everywhere south of the Rio Grande. The Monroe Doctrine, which had once meant only that the Americas were closed to European colonial expansion, had been expanded and perverted into a claim that the whole region of the Caribbean was in effect the empire of the United States. As late as 1926 there was a strong party in the United States working for the occupation of Mexico. The armed forces of the United States were intervening continually in many of the Caribbean countries. In commercial policy we were actuated by a crude economic nationalism, forcing our exports abroad, refusing to take imports in return. Private interests, backed by the government, were challenging the sovereignty of several of the Latin states, backing one faction against another, and entangling the United States in their internal affairs.

The American public has never fully understood how bad things were in this hemisphere in those days, and how dangerously we were drifting into a policy of aggression which would have provoked hatreds as poisonous as those of central and eastern Europe. It was only when things were at their very worst that the United States drew back and began that reversal of its policy which has borne fruit today in the remarkable change of feeling at Buenos Aires.

The man who inaugurated this change of United States policy was Mr. Dwight W. Morrow and the occasion was his mission to Mexico. When he went to Mexico City the Coolidge administration had drifted to the very edge of war. But Morrow was a genuine liberal, not merely a sentimental liberal, who thoroughly understood the liberal policy in public affairs. He really believed in the self-government of peoples as the surest way to achieve domestic peace. He really believed in the freest possible trade. He really disbelieved in the use of force to acquire concessions and special privileges, or to collect debts. And though President Coolidge had no very clear ideas on any of these matters, he preferred a quiet life and he knew two things: that his administration was in trouble and that he could trust his classmate and friend to get him out of it.

As a substitute for chestnut, hemlock is recommended as the best native tree to plant for use in rough construction work on the farm.

TRACY CREEK

E. Tompkins and sons lost a valuable horse Sunday when the animal slipped on frozen ground slightly covered with ice and broke her hip. The horse was purchased at Bath when four years old and the present owners had had her 16 years and had never seen a sick day.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Potter and family of Woodhull spent Sunday with Mrs. Potter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zeno Selleck.

Alfred Parcells is able to be out after having scarlet fever.

Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Barron of Addison were making calls in this vicinity Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Parcells were in Addison Sunday.

Several from this vicinity attended church at Boyd's corners Sunday. George Dingwell of Northrup Street preached the sermon and other services were in charge of Mrs. Cora Bentley, who is doing very well among the young people in the vicinity. Three months ago there were only three or four in the young people's class and now there are twenty-two members.

While the Tracy Creek correspondent was writing her items the first of the week, a herd of four deer could be seen feeding on a hill just a few rods from the house where they had been most of the forenoon. Herds of deer are a common sight in this vicinity.

Based on yearly average costs, it costs more to produce 100 pounds of milk in fall and winter months than during spring and summer months.

Morrow succeeded in destroying the influence of the interventionists and in giving the policy of the United States a wholly new direction, a wholly different intention, a wholly different mood. His mission marked the decisive end of our imperialism in this hemisphere, the abrupt abandonment of what was popularly known as dollar diplomacy. His work was carried on by Mr. Reuben Clark as Under Secretary of State and as Ambassador to Mexico. It was Mr. Clark who wrote the historic memorandum demonstrating that the Monroe Doctrine has no rightful connection with the idea that the United States could or should intervene at will in this hemisphere.

Thereafter, under President Hoover and Secretary Stimson, the reversal of policy went forward. We not only ceased to intervene but we began to withdraw our marines from the countries where they had intervened. On this foundation President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have built. They adopted the new liberal policy and called it the policy of the Good Neighbor. They have carried it much further. Their great contribution has been in supplementing the Morrow policy of political non-interference and of personal respect for Latin-American sovereignty with the liberalism of much freer trade. They have seen that it was to our advantage and to that of the other American states that trade should be freer, and they have promoted order in countries like Cuba, for example, not by force but by giving the people a chance to earn a living.

Let no one say, therefore, that the greater peace and good will which prevail in this hemisphere are due solely to the fact that it is less crowded and that it is without the ancient animosities of Europe. This hemisphere enjoys a relatively more civilized political existence because it has consciously adopted a policy which promotes a civilized existence. Things might easily have gone the other way here, too, and the only reason they did not was that at the crucial moment there were effective men who had the courage of liberal ideas. The same poisons were working here: in 1926 the war party was proclaiming that without intervention bolshevism would consolidate itself in Mexico and Nicaragua and pervade the two continents. Even our own State Department was talking in that fashion just before Ambassador Morrow went to Mexico.

All this is worth recalling, because it shows that if things are better in the Americas today they are better because they have been made better when they might have been made worse. The relative peace of these continents is not an accidental blessing. It has been earned. It has been deliberately arrived at. And it will grow stronger, not because the people of this hemisphere are better people than the Europeans, but only as they continue to follow the better policy which they have at last adopted. So when we say that the peace of the American system is an example, the point to be emphasized is that the American system exemplifies above all the enlightenment of a great power which has deliberately renounced imperialism and the alleged profits of aggression.

That is the only reason why the expansion of our own armaments arouses no fears today either in Latin America or in Canada. Our neighbors know, not from our protestations but from our acts over a period of ten years—from the peaceable solution of our disputes with Mexico, from the withdrawal of our armed forces, from the Hull treaties and from the inner convictions of those who now control our foreign policy—that the United States Navy is in truth not an instrument of aggression against any one of them. They have come to know that the United States has renounced imperialism because the people of the United States now deeply disbelieve in it.

W. S. Murray Elected Chairman Of Republican State Committee

William S. Murray, chemist, engineer, Republican Leader of Oneida County, and trustee of Colgate University, was unanimously elected Chairman of the Republican State Committee to succeed Melvin C. Eaton at a meeting of the Committee, held Monday, December 14, in the National Republican Club.

Mr. Murray was placed in nomination by Congressman-elect Dr. Fred J. Douglas, former Mayor of Utica, and his nomination was seconded by John R. Crews, Republican Leader of Kings County; J. Russell Sprague, Republican Leader of Nassau; former Assemblyman Albert Callan of Columbia County and a number of other upstate Committeemen and Committeewomen.

Following his election as State Chairman, Mr. Murray made the following brief address:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I certainly appreciate very much this unanimous decision. I shall do everything in my power to make a united party of the Republican Party. I believe the way to do that is to get acquainted with people. Therefore, you shall probably see me in your counties from time to time, and I hope I will be welcome, and spend a day or so with you, and I think in that way we can get along very well. I am not much of a speaker. I don't enjoy it much. I would rather do a little chemistry and a little politics. Thank you."

Background of Mr. Murray

Mr. Murray is forty-nine years old, was born in Stillson's, Warren County, Pa. He went to Colgate University for his education, and after majoring in mathematics and chemistry at Colgate, he was graduated in 1910 and holds Phi Betta Kappa key.

Following graduation from Colgate, he settled down to his chosen profession as a chemical engineer. He is now consulting engineer for the Oneida Community Ltd., silversmiths, with offices in Oneida and its plant in Sherrill, N. Y. In 1913 he married Miss Margaret N. Collins of Bradford, Pa. There are two children, George C., who is a sophomore at Colgate, and Margaret Kay, 17, who will enter Vassar next year.

After taking more or less casual interest in politics through association with political friends, he ran for the State Senate from the 36th District in 1930 against Samuel H. Miller, who ran on both the Democratic and Socialist tickets.

The combined Democratic and Socialist vote gave Mr. Miller a majority of 510 votes, but if the Socialist vote could be eliminated, Mr. Murray would have received a majority of 872. Accordingly Mr. Murray instituted a contest to unseat Senator Miller which went to the floor of the Senate in which Mr. Murray won a strict party vote of 26 to 23. A special election was ordered to settle the issue, but Mr. Murray did not run. Charles B. Horton ran in his stead and was elected.

Continuing in local politics, however, Mr. Murray was elected County Chairman three years ago. He supported Senator George R. Fearon of Onondaga, for Republican gubernatorial nomination against Mr. Bleakley at the Republican State Convention last fall.

During the last session of the Legislature, Mr. Murray was in favor of the social security and other progressive legislation and he is regarded by his supporters as a liberal.

Mr. Murray spent virtually all day Tuesday at the Republican State Committee headquarters in the Liggett Building, 41, East 42nd Street, New York City, and told newspapermen that he would be at headquarters much of the time after he had returned to Utica to arrange his personal affairs.

Finances in Good Condition

Another highlight of the State Committee meeting Monday was the report of Laurence M. Marks, Treasurer of the Republican State Committee, who made known that there was a balance in the treasury of $53,581 and an additional $35,680 in the United Republican Finance Committee, making for a total of $89,000

In his report Mr. Marks declared that, at a meeting of officers of the State Committee held in July, it was decided that $1,000,000 was needed to finance New York State's 1936 campaign. It had previously been arranged, he said, that the Republican National Finance Committee of New York City was to raise all campaign funds in the five boroughs of New York City. Of the first $3,000,000 raised in the State, Mr. Marks went on, the Republican State Committee was to receive one-third and the National Committee two-thirds as it came in. After that, it was declared, the State Committee was to get ten per cent and the National Committee ninety per cent.

"Unfortunately", Mr. Marks continued, "the National Finance Committee of New York City was unable to secure its expected contributions and in the middle of October we were faced with an extremely critical situation. Payments due to counties were overdue. Overhead expenses were at their peak. Money was coming in slowly. On the old one-third-two-thirds basis the future looked black.

"At this time the officers of the State Committee met with Mr. Hamilton and other officers of the National Committee. It was estimated that a minimum of $471,000 was needed to adequately finance the balance of the campaign, and the National Committee agreed that the first $471,000 raised in New York by the Republican National Committee should go in its entirety to the State Committee. Once more, the National Committee fell down, but due to the efforts of Charles D. Hilles and several other friends of the Committee the major portion of the necessary $471,000 was obtained for the State Treasury, and the State Committee was able to meet its obligations in full.

"As of noon today, the balance in the Treasury of the New York Republican State Committee was $53,581.46, which represents a campaign balance of $23,416.33 plus the balance in our regular fund as of June 24, 1936 of $30,165.13; and in the United Republican Finance Committee, of which I was also Treasurer, $35,680.59."

Party Votes "Liberalization"

The Republican State Committee, at its meeting last Monday, also voted for "liberalization of the party." This followed a resolution introduced by Congressman Hamilton Fish which follows:

"Resolved, That the Republican State Committee favors liberalization of Republican leadership and Republican policies in state and Nation."

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

DECORATING THE HOME
By Lucile G. Smith

Only a few different plant materials are needed for Christmas and these are usually easy to get. Many kinds of foliage are suitable. Florists have good selections of flowers, foliage and berries at this season; others can be gathered in the woods or clipped from trees and shrubs on the home grounds.

Care should be taken to protect ground pine, laurel, black alder, winter berries and other native plants that are becoming rare, because often they are thoughtlessly uprooted. Other kind of plants should be chosen.

Pine, cedar, spruce, fir, hemlock and other evergreens may be used to get the holiday atmosphere in the home. Hemlock drops its needles very soon after it is brought indoors. Balsam fir holds its color and lasts longer than most of the other evergreens. English ivy makes effective wreaths. Teazel, milkweed pods, dried grasses, cones, sumac and colored berries such as bittersweet, barberry and mountain ash help to make attractive decorations.

Tools needed to make decorations for the holiday include a pair of pruning shears and a sharp knife or an old pair of strong scissors. Wire cutters are helpful but not necessary.

Only the Face Is Changed

The Santa Claus on the Christmas Seal this year differs from the nine other Santas on previous tubercu osis-fighting stickers. The jovial, ageless old man on this 30th Christmas Seal symbolizes good health for all.

Washington Snapshots by JAMES PRESTON

The election is over, but backstage there is more campaigning going on in Washington than there has been for two years. It centers around one of the most powerful offices in the federal government—that of Majority Leader of the House of Representatives.

Together, the Speaker of the House and the Majority Leader decide policy upon pertinent public questions. Most of the time they have the advice of some other members, but when it comes to a hard-fought issue the word of the Speaker and the Majority Leader is final.

Representative Bankhead of Alabama will be the Democratic candidate for the Speakership. The Democrats have such a huge majority that Bankhead will be elected with dispatch. The real fight will be over the Majority Leadership, for in recent years it has been traditional for the Majority Leader to succeed to the Speakership.

Two men of opposing backgrounds and characteristics are the outstanding candidates for that job—Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas and John J. O'Connor of New York.

Rayburn is a farm boy, from a conservative Texas district. O'Connor is city bred, with so-called "progressive" leanings. Rayburn is a personal friend of Vice President Garner, who is close to the President. O'Connor's brother, Basil, was once the President's law partner.

There is an issue even deeper than background and leanings in the picture, however—sectionalism. It always is an issue among the Democrats, for committee chairmanships are awarded on the basis of seniority and the South is the only section which has sent the same members to Congress for enough consecutive terms for them to win the coveted chairmanships.

For example, a majority of the most potent House committees are headed by Southerners—Appropriations, which originates all appropriations; Ways and Means, which handle taxes and tariffs; Agriculture; Interstate and Foreign Commerce; Banking and Currency; Foreign Affairs; Judiciary; Military Affairs.

A common complaint heard around Capitol Hill is this: "The Southern Democrats didn't increase in number this year. It was the North that elected the members giving the Democrats the big majority in the House. And all they get out of it is legislation written by Southerners."

To that argument the Southerners retort by pointing out that the President is from New York, and that a big majority of his leading Cabinet and "Little Cabinet" members—who administer the laws—are from the North.

But neither argument settles the issue. The only thing that will is the counting of ballots when the House Democrats meet in secret caucus and elect their Majority Leader.

The Republicans, small though their number be, are not without their troubles. Already there is talk against the Minority Leadership of Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York. Snell has been high in Republican councils for years; he was one-third of the old "Triumvirate"—Longworth-Tilson-and-Snell". Longworth is dead and Tilson was defeated. Snell alone remains.

But now Representative Hamilton Fish of New York has served notice that he may lead a fight on the re-election of Mr. Snell to the Republican leadership post.

The young people of the Cameron M. E. Church will hold a fair and supper in the town hall December 17. A beef steak supper will be served in connection with the fair.

The Rev. R. H. Crane officiated at the funeral of Nathan Travis at Hornell Sunday afternoon. The burial was in Town Line Cemetery.

The Rev. Crane attended the ministers' meeting of the Bath group of the Hornell District at Coss Corners Monday afternoon.

The progressive supper held by the Young People's Society of Cameron and Cameron Mills churches was well attended and enjoyed.

COMMUNICATION

Advertiser:

In my letter of last week I mentioned the surface-area of the water at flood time in the Tuscarora dam as being "one and three-fourths square miles"! this was an error made inadvertently in typing the letter. It should have read "one and three-eighths square miles", as estimated from survey maps in my possession. I hasten to make correction before somebody else does it for me.

It locks to me that the creation of this big dam here, will mark the beginning of a BIGGER AND BETTER ADDISON. And that the old days of a puny and dwindling village, with its industries all leaving—let us hope that this is forever past.

Here and now we have a picture of a community of less than 2000 population suddenly increase to 5,000 people. And with all the advantages which the larger size is sure to bring. Scores of things from now on will be ours which were impossible with the smaller-sized community. Not all these things, of course, can be exactly mentioned nor predicted; but there are ways and means which almost surely can be found, if we try, to bid adieu forever to the little "old Addison" of the past, and to hail the bigger and better town. But we must begin, without delay, to study and to find ways to bring these permanent conditions about.

I know of possibly a dozen reasons why Addison should, from this on, be a far better town than she has been.

The first thing should be organized and systematic effort not only to collect and put into operation new ideas to make the larger community permanent; but to get scores of people to thinking and forming plans by which this can be inaugurated.

It is almost certain, that if we try we can find veritable "wizards" right here in our midst, who can hatch up all sorts of workable and profitable schemes to be put into operation to this end. I have great faith in female 'intuition' (sub-conscious manifestation) in forming such workable and effective plans. Thousands of women have made a success of business where their husbands dismally failed. But let us use both; the 'intuition' means and the so-called "solid reasoning of the male (mere man).

Trucks and autos will be everywhere! Addison's main street will be, especially in evening, a veritable 'Broadway'! Bands will be playing; fakirs will be here and there; lectures and other meetings in halls! There will be more social and sociable events than you can shake a stick at!

But it is 'up to' us now to see that this step ahead which Addison now takes, is not lost. Now is the time to seek and to get other things here besides the dam! A good organization first—one with teeth in it and that will act.

Ten Eyck Asks Milk Industry Control Ideas

Commissioner Peter G. Ten Eyck of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets has invited the heads of large milk distributing companies, editors of agricultural publications, farm leaders and individual milk producers to make "recommendations regarding the Milk Control Law."

Announcing his invitation to leaders of the milk industry to go on record as to "continuance, discontinuance or amendment of the Milk Control Law", Commissioner Ten Eyck said he hoped to get the most reliable cross-section of milk industry opinion yet assembled.

"I decided to make this move", Commissioner Ten Eyck said, "as a result of newspaper discussions of the milk control law, together with complaints as to this proposed stabilizing factor in the industry. A few of the discussions which I have read appeared to be made entirely from a selfish standpoint or from lack of information or knowledge of the milk industry. These facts, together with some unsatisfactory conditions existing, undoubtedly will make milk control a matter for consideration and perhaps action in the forthcoming session of the Legislature. I have asked certain designated leaders of the industry to write me, as Commisioner of Agriculture and Markets, setting forth their recommendations regarding the milk control law as to its continuance, discontinuance or such amendments as they feel should be made at the coming session of the Legislature and as to its administration by this Department to improve present-day conditions.

"It is my expectation that each of the representatives of the milk industry to whom I have addressed requests shall make full and frank written statements, unmistakably establishing their true opinion of the Milk Control Law. Personally I feel the time has arrived when each one should assume his responsibility in endeavoring to bring about a continuous, orderly marketing of the supply of clean, wholesome, sanitary milk, produced in New York State, keeping in mind that the producer must be paid a proper price to compensate him fully for the production of his milk and at the same time assure the consumer of a continued, adequate supply of such milk at a fair price.

"In my opinion, the producer, dealer, cooperative, storekeeper, ice cream manufacturer, producer-distributor, as well as all the different units in the milk trade, should cooperate with each other to the fullest extent to eliminate all differences and put a stop to the unlawful practices indulged in at the present time."

Commissioner Ten Eyck revealed that a majority of the invitations have been mailed but he said a few more may be sent out soon.

It is understood that when the recommendations of the milk company presidents, farm group organization representatives and individual dairymen have been received by the Commissioner, he will call together his milk advisory committee. The Commissioner will submit the recommendations to the advisory committee for consideration, after which he will take such additional steps as conditions may warrant.

Should Milk Control Be Continued?

If we are to have a Milk Control law continue, and that seems to be the prevailing notion, although not many dairymen like it, it is high time we were considering what sort of a law it should be. Some fear the consequences if the present Control Law be left to expire next March with nothing to take its place. A price-fixing law would hardly satisfy, yet a stable price is what is most needed. It doesn't work is the trouble. A frequent comment is that a Board with ample appropriations to audit is needed. But, say some, why audit if you cannot enforce. I have talked with several who had experience in working out the present law and they seem almost discouraged as to what sort of a law will benefit. None of those who helped to make the law are ready to give up and do nothing. I am not particularly anxious to see Control continued but there is enough sentiment for a law to call for planning. Wish dairymen would say what they think is necessary.

Give New York State Apples, Maple Syrup, Honey, Jellies

Food products of New York State attractively packed in holiday boxes either by the producer or the giver, will make Christmas presents which anyone should appreciate, suggests Commissioner Peter G. Ten Eyck of the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Commissioner Ten Eyck listed a few of the products of New York as suggested Christmas giifts: Pure New York State maple syrup, a box of New York State apples, a whole-milk cheese or an assortment of New York State cheeses, a jar of crystal clear honey, home-made jams jand jellies, New York State fruit and fruit jucices, grape juice and so forth made from grapes grown in this State, or one of the famed Long Island ducklings.

It has been called to the Department's attention, according to it's Consumer's Information Service, that a number of alert producers on the trail of new business already are packing a few of the State's food products in boxes to make them suitable for Christmas presents without any added effort on the part of the giver.

"Presents of this kind", Commissioner Ten Eyck said, "will serve two purposes at least; they provide very acceptable gifts which will be appreciated by almost anyone, and at the same time they serve to attract attention of the consuming public to the excellence of New York State's wide variety of first quality food products. I hope the idea gains in favor."

Consumers' Information Service of the Department of Agriculture and Markets this week suggested the purchase of New York State parsnips, turnips and beets. To promote wider use of those vegetables, the Service is distributing free upon request to its Albany office a recipe book, "Vegetable Foods." A copy of "Vegetatble Foods" will be sent to anyone making a post-card request for a copy.

Lyons Says Milk Market Problems Not Yet Solved

Is there a substitute for the Classified Plan?

There are very few substitutes for the Classified Plan proposed. The nearest that anyone seems to have come to it, is for dairymen in a locality to own a milk plant of some sort, no matter how small or how large may be the production of milk in the locality and sell to dealers only so much milk as they will take at the highest price. I have talked with farmers and others about this project and find that those who have given the subject study see real difficulties with it.

Frequently it means too small an amount of milk to sell or to manufacture profitably. It means too, many say, that every last one of those units will bid against every other for the best market, the market known as ClassI. If that be true, and none can doubt it, there surely would follow price cutting even beyond any previously known, and a market demoralized beyond hope of recruiting.

It is safe to say that there is to be a classified plan used. Who is to do the classifying? This seems to be the sentiment, nearly, not quite, universal. It should be dairymen acting together with power to audit books. Our milk marketing problems are not all solved.

Farmers Face Better Times— More Income Expected in 1937

General improvement in most branches of farming with more total income, is the 1937 agricultural outlook for New York State, according to economists at the State College of Agriculture. They point out that the trend of the general price level and the building cycle continues to be the most important thing affecting profits in agriculture and industry.

"More ample credit for financing sound farm operations is in prospect than at any time since before the depression. Interest rates on long-term loans are now the lowest in the history of the country.

"The feed situation is less favorable than a year ago, but with average weather conditions in 1937, feed supplies should return to about normal. Farm wages are likely to continue to raise."

Short feed supplies, an increased demand for milk, and more cows typify the dairy outlook. Recovery in the use of fluid milk which has continued through 1936 will probably continue during 1937.

"Total milk production in the New York shed is being well maintained, and prices for manufactured dairy products are recovering. Although indications are for a further increase in numbers of dairy cows, cattle prices are expected to continue strong."

Poultry farmers are temporarily at a disadvantage because of the unfavorable feed situation, the economists point out. However, the upward trend in the purchasing power of poultry and eggs is expected to continue. Total commercial and non-commercial hatchings may not be as large in 1937 in the United States as in 1936.

"The United States farm income from poultry and eggs is closely related to the income of industrial workers and the building cycle, which is expected to be larger in 1937 than in 1936."

The outlook in other branches of farming is included in the new Cornell bulletin E-362, "The New York State 1937 Agricultural Outlook". Single copies may be had free from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Dairy Industry On the Upgrade

Dairymen who keep cost-accounts with the New York State College of Agriculture had a better year in 1935 than in 1934. Improvement was due mainly to: milk prices up, cow values up, feed costs down, and calf values up.

Returns for an hour of labor on dairy cows averaged 33 cents, or 17 cents more than in 1934. The 20 farms with the highest profit, produced milk for $1.58 cents a hundredweight and sold it for $1.95. The low profit group lost 37 cents a hundredweight. The average cost of producing milk on 60 farms was $1.81, and the average return was $1.90 a hundredweight.

These figures are compiled by the department of farm management at Cornell University. The accounts are from farms larger and more productive than the average in New York state, but Dr. Paul S. Williamson, who had charge of the work, says they are useful in comparing and analysing the farm business. The present study, for all types of farming, was completed with the aid of 95 farmers in 34 counties of the state.

Other figures for 1935 are revealed by the accounts:

School, county, and town taxes averaged $236 a farm, or one and three-tenths per cent of the value of the farm.

Hens of cost-account farms averaged 146 eggs, or about 44 more eggs than the average for the state.

Cabbage, canning-factory peas and tomatoes, and potatoes gave better returns for each hour of labor than in 1934. Less returns are noted for sweet corn and dry beans.

Modernization of farm buildings, development of better equipment for family-size farms, and more widespread interest in irrigation are among the trends in agricultural engineering.

Hints to trappers are given in Cornell bulletin E-319 "The Fur-Bearers of New York and Their Relation to Agriculture." Single copies are available free from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Painted Post Indians Scalp Addison Knights 32 to 11

High School Squad Trimmed by Veteran Basketball Squad — Locals Show Fight in First Quarter But Are Outdistanced in Final Three Periods—Second Team Bests Visitors in Last Minute Rally.

As to follow the clawing Northside gave Addison the Painted Post Indians lifted the Knight's scalp using a 32 to 11 victory knife.

Gardner and company gave their usual show of fight but again as in the Northside game the veteran Posters intercepted numerous Addison passes.

Walt Grace and Walton proved too much for the youthful Knights both were dangerous men when Robbins, Hargrave and crew were in school.

Painted Post collected scores in the first quarter with baskets by Grace, Smith and a foul by D. Bills.

The second quarter scoring opened when Walton found the hoop for a double decker and followed it a moment later with another. Orr broke away for Addison's first score. Ken Bills retaliated with a pretty side shot. Following an Addison time-out Grace converted a foul for the Blue and White. Orr and Thompson both gave their cause a couple of points. Orr on a steve from center and Thompson with a pretty pivot on the foul line. The half ending 12 to 6 in the invaders' favor.

Perkins started things in the third with a side shot. Gardner followed with another two points for the Addison team. A converted foul by D. Bills and the Posters were on the move, two baskets by Grace and one each by Walton and Ken Bills gave them a 20 to 10 lead.

Hopper's throw from the foul line being the Knight's only score in the last quarter. Four baskets by Walton and two by Grace completed the scoring for the Posters.

Walton with 14 and Grace with 10 led the Indians in the scoring column. While Orr was the only Addison player to find the hoop more than once.

AHS-PP SIDELIGHTS

I was surprised Painted Post did not throw the ball to the referees as both looked almost like the winners, dressed in their clean white suits.

What happened to the local boosters? Did they know the home team was going to be beaten and so stayed away from the game? The crowd was small, but enthusiastic.

And this enthusiasm lasted thruout the entire game, for the yells for "Addison" were just as strong at the close of the game as in the beginning.

Saw Mrs. Gladstone bound out of her seat when one of the locals made an exceptionally good shot from mid-court in the second quarter when the locals started a rally.

The Addison cheer leaders deserve a great deal of credit for the work they do during a game. I'd like to make one suggestion to them. That would be that they give at least one courteousy yell for the opponents, especially on the local court.

Addison was handicapped by a veteran squad such as the Indians possessed. This was noticeable as the winners took tipoff after tipoff and despite excitement worked the ball into scoring position, while the Knights were forced to shoot from a long range or hurry their shots.

One of our contemporary newspapers carried a story recently about a Japanese hen which laid 36,111 eggs in 365 days. Those are a lot of eggs or a lot of story.

Read an article the other day telling of Napoleon consulting cards before going into battle. At Waterloo the fortune teller must have used a stacked deck, stacked by Wellington.

This has noting to do with the former King and his lady love, but English courts have held that no man can kiss a girl without her permission, else he goes to jail. And this applies to Misses of four as well as 14 or 40. Kissing without permission is listed as common assault. This is America boys, so its alright.

I've noticed the careless abandon with which some motorists went through the streets of the city last Thursday, splashing muddy water on pedestrians. This is a careless habit, for none would think of deliberately splashing muddy water on another person.

A very distinguished looking woman stepped out of a nearby store and desiring to attract the attention of a friend, put two fingers in her mouth and gave a very loud whistle. The signal worked.

—o—

Saw a man on the street carrying a brief case and in the lapel of his overcoat was a six-inch red button with white letters reading, "Buy cigars for Christmas". No doubt as to his business. And I venture to say everyone he passed read the button.

Smoke rings have always attracted me. Monday afternoon a perfect ring came from the stack of a B. & O. engine here. There was little wind and the ring floated quite high in the air before disbanding.

She was quite beyond middle age and with the infirmities of her years success had not been too kind to her, for her face was lined, her eyes sunken and her hands bore the imprint of hard work. She was crying when I saw her, for she had lost $11 in a small pocketbook. This meant her Christmas dinner and some small toys for grandchildren.

One little girl we saw had not forgotten her bottle days. Two little tots, one of under one year and another slightly over, were in a carriage together. The younger was enjoying her bottle, enjoying it too much for the patience of the older, who quickly reached over, took the bottle and sat contentedly back in the carriage. A good Samaritan quelled the cries of the younger by placing the bottle where it belonged.

I met a happy man recently. There are few really happy people I have learned. The young man laughed loud and deeply at jokes in the funny paper. Few of us do that, for we keep them inside us or use a polite smile. In addition he spoke to everyone on the street and with a smile. And when he was walking alone, he whistled loudly and happily, the strains of happy songs. I envied him.

How many of you have noticed the gun on the lawn of the Painted Post Presbyterian Church?

—o—

I go to bed too early week-end nights. During the past several weeks the old town has taken on a new lease of life, after the midnight hour. Yes, sir, there is plenty doing in the "wee sma' hours", and right here in Addison too. Others have called my attention to this also.

—o—

Ordinarily I'm not a morbid individual. However, news events of these days constantly contain reminders that something is wrong with our way of living. Too many people are dying suddenly and I don't mean in auto accidents either. Better take stock of situations around you and take the advice of the insurance man and "be prepared".

—o—

Life is stranger than fiction. The old poem describing death of an organist as he played at his console came true in Amsterdam recently. A church organist went alone into the church to play. Shortly after he was found dead. Music continued to pour forth from the instrument. The lifeless fingers on the keys continued to operate the organ.

—o—

That's all.

Addison CCC Camp Activities

Mr. Mullen of the Addison Advertiser staff met his class in journalism for the first time last Thursday. Some excellent results are expected of this particular class. The class members will have various assignments in writing material for the camp paper and the column of the Addison Advertiser.

The camp services conducted by Father Moffett has been moved up to an earlier hour. The meeting is held at 1:15 P. M. on Sundays instead of the usual hour of 3:00.

Basketball and boxing are more than holding their own in the recreational program of the camp. The matches and games held before the holidays will serve mostly to develop the fellows into better basketball players or boxers.

From all indications the basketball team should more than hold its own in CCC competition. The boxers at the moment are of an unknown quantity. However, the match scheduled with the Monterey Camp Thursday night in Corning will go a long ways towards determining the camp's representative in each class.

Boxing match to be held at Moose Hall in Corning Thursday night at 8:30 P. M.

CCC Camp CE-19, Co. 231 of Addison will meet the CCC Camp S-123, Co. 3201 of Monterey. Each bout will be three rounds of two minutes each with no decision. There are eight matches on the program. Louis Paulino of Corning will referee the matches.

On Thursday of last week the same two camps met in an informal match at Moose Hall. The match served only as an exhibition and there were no decisions.

Fistic Flashes

Both camps are looking forward to the coming bouts with much interest and enthusiasm. Such a match will aid in a large measure to determine the various representatives, in their weights, who will fight for their camps in the District CCC championships.

In the second game the CCC boys staged a brilliant rally late in the second half to close the gap to within four points of their opponents.

Alfred Founded On Kiss Old Records Show

Dr. John Nelson Norwood, president of Alfred University, is authority for the statement that Alfred University was "founded on a kiss". The information was discovered in the archives of the village when information was sought relative to the founding of the University. This information was desired for "Founder's Day".

Legend states that 100 years ago the students of the private school of that day met in the second floor of a home in the village. There was a singing group in the village which for want of a better place met in the village church for practice lessons and singing. This went much against the wishes of the villagers, but there seemed to be nothing done about it until . . .

One day a singer in the church kissed a girl of the school in front of the church congregation. That was the deciding factor. The villagers decided that the singing school must move into quarters of their own.

In 1837 a building was constructed for them and paradoxically enough the singing school was also invited to meet in the schoolhouse, but at a different time.

The school authorities were granted a university charter in 1837.

Mrs. F. C. Taber Fractures Hip

Mrs. F. C. Taber had the misfortune to fall in her home Friday morning and suffered a fractured hip. The fracture has been supported by the new type of wire splints now used in such cases, and is much more comfortable the past three days. The fine optimism of spirit which has always been natural with Mrs. Taber, is a great aid in her fight for recovery.

Dam Test Pits On Tuscarora Dug by CCC

CCC boys are now engaged in digging test pits for the dam to be built on the Tuscarora creek, west of this village. These test pits are being dug for the engineers who will be in charge of the project. They will determine the manner in which concrete will be poured, digging for the base will be done and other engineering problems will be solved by these pits, which act as guides for the construction engineers. Lieutenant Willard H. Johnson, construction superintendent at the camp, is supervising the work of the boys on this project. There are 42 boys doing the work.

Regular employment records are kept of the time each corps member works as in civilian employment and all charges against the job are kept as would be done by a private company undertaking the project. In this manner all costs directly made against the contract job can be estimated on the basis of the work now being done, if a contract is ever let for the project.

Total costs can also be estimated for the future reference and also time charges so that it will be known how many man hours were employed to construct the dam, through all the preliminary stages of the work.

Power of Hymns Lacey's Topic At Union Service

"Songs in the Night" was the topic of the sermon delivered by the Rev. Garland G. Lacey, Methodist pastor, at the union church service held in the Baptist Church Sunday night. The speaker chose incidents from the Bible to illustrate his talk.

The first song in the night described was that of Christ and his disciples singing hymns before Mount Olivet. The second song in the night was that of Paul and Silas in the prison cell and singing a song of praise. The final song described was that of the Hebrew children in captivity in Babylona and their songs played on the harp.

The Rev. Lacey said, "In each instance the singing of praises brought victory out of apparent defeat". He cited many more modern examples of the singing of the praises of God. Among the notable ones presented was that of Fannie Crosby, composer of over 7,000 hymns and yet she was blind from her sixth birthday.

The prayer was given by the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, host pastor and the scripture was read by the Rev. John V. Axtell of the Presbyterian Church.

There will be no union service this week. The Sunday service has been postponed one week and will be held in the Presbyterian Church December 27.

ble and in the north, tonsils help us adjust to the weather. The fad of removing tonsils is passing.

"Adolescent goitre is another thing which should be considered. The thyroid gland enlarges for energy in the young and returns to normal in due course of time. Some are toxic but most are not dangerous.

"Another thing that has had a run is the fad in dieting. Over one half of the cases of chronic indigestion are caused from mental worry, not in what is eaten, nor how it is eaten. I once consulted a dentist about pyhorrea and told him I believe that most of the cases of that disease were in people who used toothbrushes, which punctures the skin and causes infections to set in. The dentist did not deny it. If a tooth brush must be used, I would advise a soft one.

"The heart is the main organ in pneumonia cases and if that can be kept active the fight will be a success. Alcohol will not do this for it counteracts the drugs given to stimulate the heart, unless in an exceptional case where the victim might be an alcohol addict.

"I believe that mental growth is retarded 25 percent in children of school age who smoke, but is not particularly harmful to adults.

"Milk produced at 12 cents is worth all of that if it aids a baby and prevents cholera infantum. The high price is keeping many from buying fresh milk and they are using canned milk. As a result, children are undernourished. The best milk in the world, pasteurized from the cleanest dairy and from the best tested cattle, cannot prevent disease if tthe milk is not cared for in the home and accessories used for it there are not cleaned. There is no case on record of a child catching cholera infantum from dairies or cows, but it comes from the homes."

Scout Rally Draws Large Attendance

lined the new policy of buying 10 cent council stamps to save towards going to camp and then turned the program over to Tom Flannery, who is in charge of camp activities. He introduced a camporee program.

Scout David Stiker, Troop 27, Addison, gave some of the bugle calls that will be required in the bugling contest. District winners of these contests will be eligible for Camp Bugler for the summer.

A demonstration of fire by friction was given to show what would be expected. Native rock must be used and a piece of steel. Tinder must not be doctored but must be charred cloth and hemp. The fire kindled must burn a string two feet above the fire.

No first aid demonstration was required Thursday, but teams of four Scouts each will compete at the Camporee. Sealed instructions will be given each team captain at the time of the event, so there will be no preparation for the particular type of first aid to be rendered.

Chief Dunn placed 20 nature objects on the stage and troops competed to determine which could correctly name the most. This was non-competitive. At camp Scouts will go into the woods and identify objects.

The judging events to be held were demonstrated at the round-up. Scouts were asked to guess the weight of a man, number of pages in a book, determine the number of beans in a jar when given the number in a smaller jar, to give the width of a book, distance across the stage and to determine weights, distances and numbers of other objects.

Rr. McNamara presented Star awards to Robert Haine and Dann Fall, troop 31; John DeMaggio, 50; Joseph Fellow, 60 and Dean Williams, 21. Life Scout awards were presented to Glen James, Joseph and James Dowling.

The night's program closed with all Scouts and Scouters reciting the Scout law.

Members of the Board of Education, members of the faculty and staff of the Addison High School were thanked for making the meeting possible, for the loan of the school and the cooperation in staging the rally.

CAST FOLLOWS NAVY ROUTINE FOR FILMING

During the filming of Paramount's "Annapolis Farewell" in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., the featured players including Sir Guy Standing, Richard Cromwell, Tom Brown, John Howard and Benny Baker and other male members of the cast were required to live according to the strict regime of naval officers and midshipmen. The film comes Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to the Avon Theatre

All of the actors in the film unit daily wore the uniforms of naval officers or midshipmen and were on the Naval Academy grounds from 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning until late afternoon. Academy authorities ruled that as the actors were in uniforms and could not be distinguisheed from men in service, it would be necessary for the players to follow the Navy Academy rules.

Sir Guy Standing, an officer in the British Navy during the World War was at home in the Naval Academy but Richard Cromwell, Tom Brown and other young Hollywood actors found the strict routine of the Navy quite irksome. They did not object to saluting officers but the rules prohibiting smoking and sitting on the grass were difficult restrictions for young men accustomed to the easy freedom of Hollywood film actors.

The players were required to take off their uniforms and don civilian clothes before leaving the academy grounds and the early evening trips in autos from Annapolis to the freedom and comfort of Baltimore hotels were joyous journeys for the screen players, none of whom envied the midshipmen after observing the strict routine of their training.

Barracks Contest Being Held At CCC Camp

There are five barracks in the CCC camp on Dinniny Flats, west of this city, each housing 30 corp members. During the past week there has been great scurrying before inspection time to cleanup and spruce up the barracks and equipment.

Lieutenant Duncan H. Monroe, commander of the camp has announced that there will be a bimonthly prize for the barrack adjudged the best in the two weeks previous.

The contest was announced during the past week and the first period will close at the end of the coming week.

Judging will be on cleanliness of camp, personnel, equipment and the orderliness of equipment and records.

Lieutenant Monroe has stated that the contest has caused a marked change in the attitude of the members in camp.

During the past week the commanding officer has been visiting each of the barracks in fatigue hours to interview the personnel relative to problems they are confronting in camp. Among the things he has discovered are; the boys are outspoken in their criticisms of food, personnel, conditions, but nothing of major importance was discovered.

In the matter of food, some wanted more seasoning, some wanted more butter and others wanted less of both. By the personal contact as to problems of the camp members, Commander Monroe feels that much dissatisfaction can be eliminated by talking with the camp members.
